

I am OPPOSED to cellular telephone use aboard airborne aircrafts by passengers. The last thing I want to hear is a phone conversation of another person while I'm cramped into a sit for hours on end trying to either read or nap. It's bad enough when a child is crying or fussy aboard an aircraft but to be subjected to further distractions such as cellular phone conversations will only cause tempers to flare and arguments to break out in flight. A plane ride should be quiet and relaxing for the most part; not loud and annoying!
